Electric vehicle markets the world over are set to grow exponentially in the years ahead. Driven by decarbonisation targets and air quality ambitions, the adoption of EVs is rapidly becoming one of the global economy's must-watch events.

This much is clear just by watching the movements of the car sector. Automotive giants are turning to EVs with the kind of pace usually reserved for the vehicles they produce. Car manufacturers like Jaguar Land Rover and Ford have all put into place deadlines for the last of their conventional vehicles, led by both national regulation and consumer demand.

But the EV market is far more than just the natural progression of conventional vehicles. What's emerging is an industry in its own right, with manufacturers, suppliers, business models and an entire ecosystem to match.

The vehicles themselves are, evidently, only part of the equation.

- What kind of infrastructure will be required to facilitate the transition to electric vehicles?
- O Whose role will it be to finance, build, operate and maintain that infrastructure?
- What impact will mass adoption of electric vehicles have on the grid, and how will that be mitigated?
- What new strategies for fleet ownership and management will emerge, and how will they benefit big business?
- What will the consumer experience need to look and feel like?

With Scotland setting a more ambitious target than England of banning all conventional ICE vehicle sales by 2032, the country is on a more accelerated schedule. This means mobilising investment all the more quicker, while navigating challenges more prominent in the Scottish market, such as rural electrification.

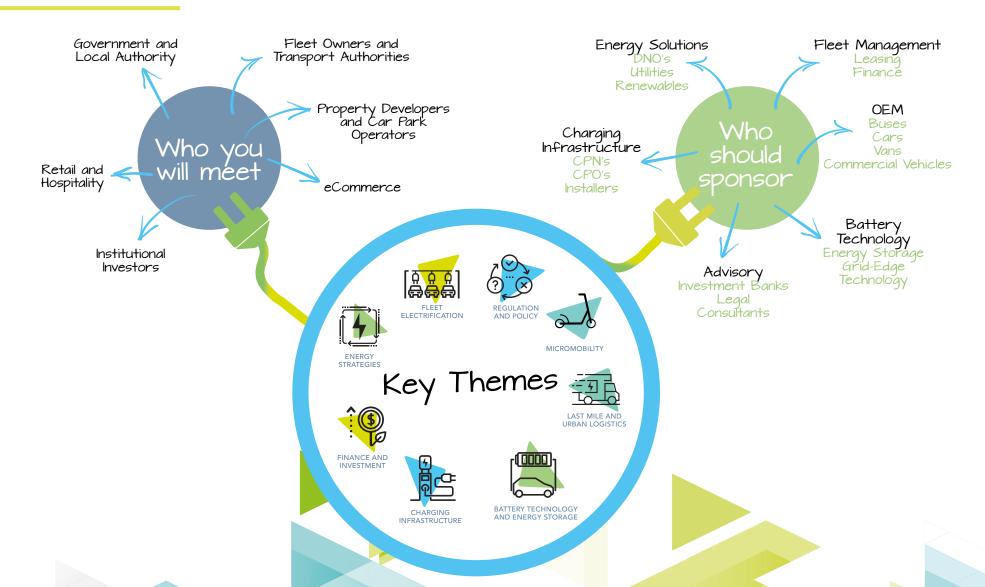

Everything EV Scotland will be the must-attend conference for the Scotlish EV market as the transport sector prepares itself for potentially its most significant revolution yet.

THE EVERYTHING EV ECO-SYSTEM

Strategy, solutions and partnerships

SCOTLAND'S TRANSITION TO ZERO EMISSIONS

"We will continue to invest more than £1 billion every year in public transport and deliver our programme of investment in all forms of transportation. We will increasingly focus our transport investment on low carbon solutions, in pursuit of the ambition we set out last year to phase out the need for new petrol and diesel cars and vans by 2032."

Delivering for today, investing for tomorrow: the Government's programme for Scotland 2018-2019 (04/09/2018)

Building an EV strategy on a bedrock of national innovation in renewable energy

EV adoption in Scotland is growing at double the rate of the rest of the United Kingdom with the government set to invest £15 million in the deployment of electric vehicles. With the UK's most aggressive ambitions for the decarbonisation of transport, strategies and solutions need to be in place for end user groups to deliver.

The electric vehicle sector in Scotland is new and hasn't built the connections between key stakeholders yet that will allow it to deliver on the Government's clean air targets and ambition to ban sale ICE vehicles after 2032.
